

The Bird Who Couldn't Fly

There was a little bluebird who had a bad day.
A day when nothing it seemed went this bird's way.
He wanted to flap and soar and learn how to fly.
But he grew mad and sore and fell from the sky.

He tried again to reach the clouds.
He cawed and squawked and chirped out loud.
He flapped his wings up and down.
Yet he didn't rise from the ground.

The little bird could not take flight.
But there he stood with all his might.
He refused to quit. He refused to fuss.
Instead of flying, he took the bus.

